PERSONAL

Jennie Reed recorded her most successful season to date in 2008 when she captured two medals and a world title at the 2008 UCI Track Cycling World Championships in March. With a remarkable 17 UCI World Cup medals to her credit throughout her career, Reed is currently the United States' most accomplished sprinter on the track. Her career hit a peak this spring when she captured a world championship in the women's keirin and a bronze medal in the sprint in Manchester, Great Britain.

Jennie began cycling with her sister Laura, and in 1994 began racing to podium finishes at national-level events. She claimed her first national titles at that year's USA Cycling Junior Track National Championships. Following her graduation from Issaquah High School in 1996, she continued her medal-winning ways throughout her college career as a member of the University of Washington Cycling Team. After claiming her first elite national title in 1998, Jennie continued to progress through the ranks and has since collected 12 national titles on the track, an overall World Cup title in the keirin in 2004 and three career world championship medals.

The Washington native now lives and trains with her Momentum teammates, Adam Duvendeck (USA), Josiah Ng (MAS) and Travis Smith (CAN) in Long Beach, Calif. In her spare time Jennie enjoys cooking and spending time with family and friends over a good cup of coffee, downhill skiing, inline skating and backpacking.

POINTS OF INTEREST

- Despite being the United States' top sprint athlete, Jennie joined forces with Sarah Hammer and Dotsie Bausch in 2007 to win a national title in the women's 3000-meter team pursuit event.
- Coached by Andy Sparks, Reed shares the same coach as two-time world champion and training partner Sarah Hammer.
